R.C.I.A. DISCUSSIONS CAPITAL VICE

The capital sins are the source of all sins. St. Thomas Aquinas preferred to use the word “vice” instead of “sin” when addressing this issue. He stated, “A capital vice is that which has an exceedingly desirable end so that in his desire for it, a man goes on to the commission of many sins, all of which are said to originate in that vice as their chief source” (Summa Theologiae, II-II, 153, 4). The emphasis is on the habit which inclines a person to sin. Capital sins or vices are indeed grave because they are the source of sins, which leads to the repetition of actual sins, and then to the spiritual corruption of the person.

The capital sins are Pride, Avarice, Lust, Envy, Gluttony, Anger, and Sloth.

Pride is “an inordinate desire for one’s own excellence.” Pride happens when a person refuses to subject his intellect and will to God, and to obey His commandments. Such a person has contempt for God and those who represent Him. In a sense, a person with complete pride makes himself a god. Spiritual remedies for pride include regular and thorough self-examination, the practice of humility and meditation on Christ’s humility and service.

Avarice is the inordinate love of riches and the good things of this life. Sparked by greed, a person can take on a sense of self-sufficiency, complacency and independence to God. To combat greed, one must be thankful in prayer each day for the many blessings enjoyed. Examine how well those blessings are used within one’s means to help those less fortunate and remember that one dies, all is left behind.

Lust is “the inordinate desire for sexual pleasure.” Sins stemming from lust include dwelling on impure thoughts, masturbation, fornication, adultery and viewing pornography. To combat lust, a person should pray for the virtue of chastity, guard against the occasion of sin (which are many in this world) and have a clear vision of the goodness of a person’s own sexuality.

Envy is “sadness on account of the goods possessed by another which are regarded as harmful to oneself since they diminish one’s own excellence or renown.” Envy breeds hatred, gossip, detraction and resentment against one’s neighbor. Remedies for envy include the practice of humility, being grateful for one’s own goods and thinking of the consequences of envy, whether loss of friendship or divine punishment.

Gluttony is “an inordinate desire for food and drink.” Gluttony is injurious to one’s mental and physical health, and oftentimes masks an even deeper spiritual problem. One must practice the virtue of temperance to prevent gluttony.

Anger is “the inordinate desire for revenge.” This “wrongful anger” that is different from “righteous anger,” where a person is angry about injustice in the world or even personal situations and seeks to address the issue and restore justice. To guard against anger, a person must be true to the virtue of justice in thought, word and deed; be in control of himself in addressing an issue; and look to the example of Christ. St. Catherine of Siena said, “There is no sin nor wrong that gives a man such a foretaste of Hell in this life as anger and impatience.”

Sloth is “sorrow in the face of spiritual good in as much as it is God’s good. Sloth is not just laziness, but especially spiritual laziness. It shows itself in laziness, procrastination, idleness, indifference and nonchalance. Sins which stem from the vice of sloth include lukewarmness toward divine precepts, drifting to what is forbidden and frequenting the occasion of sin. The remedy for sloth is remembering one’s promised eternal reward as well as one’s punishment for sin.
